

How to find documentation for FUS Elite System

In an effort to minimize the size of the Verasonics Software Release package, large documentation files are now provided to users via the Verasonics Community Web Portal. This website is restricted to Verasonics customers and requires a one-time registration. It can be reached by browsing the following URL:

<https://verasonicscommunity.com/>

Once you enter the site, please click the Vantage Resource Documents tab. Here you will find a list of Application Notes, Manuals and other helpful documentation about the Vantage system. To narrow the list of displayed documents, please enter a key term in the search box.

The FUS Elite documentation includes the following files:

FUS Elite User Documentation

This is the manual for the FUS Elite products.

The FUS Elite User Manual contains important safety and regulatory guidelines for proper use of the system, component descriptions and specifications, instructions on how to use the graphical user interface to perform Ultrasound Guided Focused Ultrasound (USgFUS) therapy planning and delivery, guidelines on experimental data collection and data management capability.

HIFU Configuration Setup Instructions

“Provides instructions on the wiring connections, initial setup, and functionality testing of the external power supply when used with a Vantage HIFU system.”

Also note that other marketing information and specifications are provided on the public Verasonics FUS Elite Products website.

For any other questions on how to use your FUS Elite product, please contact support@verasonics.com.